- Δικαιος dikaios is the Greek word for just
- Δικαιωω dikaiōō is the Greek word for justifier
- Greek verbs that end in 'οο' generally brings out that which a person is, or that which is desired but not referring to the mode in which this takes place. Here with dikaiōō it means to bring out the fact that –that person is righteous. So this word means to pronounce one as Righteous.
The justifier: to make one or to see that one is Righteous.

- K. Wuest:
- “It was a just, as well as a merciful act for God to save a sinner, for mercy was bestowed upon the basis of justice satisfied. Sin was paid for not condoned. Thus the believing sinner is saved not only by the mercy of God, but by the Righteousness of God, for his salvation rest upon the fact that his sins are paid for & justice has been maintained.
